- II. Navigating the Business Search Interface

Locating the Business Search Tool

Once on the website, look for a section dedicated to business searches, often labeled "Business Search," "Business Filings," or something similar. The interface may vary slightly over time, so be prepared to browse the site briefly to find the correct tool.

III. Types of Business Information Available

Accessing Key Business Details

The North Dakota Secretary of State's database typically provides information such as business name, registered agent, business address, filing date, business type (LLC, corporation, etc.), and business status (active, dissolved, etc.). More detailed information might be available for a fee or through separate filings.

Understanding Business Entity Types

The search results will often categorize businesses by their legal structure (e.g., Limited Liability Company (LLC), Corporation, Partnership, Sole Proprietorship). This distinction is crucial for understanding the business's liability and ownership structure.

Obtaining Registered Agent Information

The registered agent is a designated individual or entity authorized to receive legal and official documents on behalf of the business. This information is critical for legal correspondence.

IV. Searching by Different Criteria

Searching by Business Name

The most common method is searching by the business name. Be mindful of variations in spelling or abbreviations.

Using the Business ID Number

If you know the business's unique identification number issued by the Secretary of State, this provides a more precise search.

Alternative Search Methods

Some systems may allow searches by keywords related to the business activity, registered agent name, or address.

VIII. Understanding the Limitations of the Search

Data Accuracy and Timeliness

While generally reliable, remember that the information reflects the data submitted to the Secretary of State. There might be a slight delay between a business's actual status and the update in the database.

Incomplete Information

Some businesses may not have filed all necessary information, resulting in incomplete profiles.

National Research Council, Division on Engineering and Physical Sciences, Committee on Applied and Theoretical Statistics, Policy and Global Affairs, Committee on Science, Technology, and Law, Committee on Identifying the Needs of the Forensic Sciences Community, 2009-07-29 Scores of talented and dedicated people serve the forensic science community, performing vitally important work. However, they are often constrained by lack of adequate resources, sound policies, and national support. It is clear that change and advancements, both systematic and scientific, are needed in a number of forensic science disciplines to ensure the reliability of work, establish enforceable standards, and promote best practices with consistent application. Strengthening Forensic Science in the United States: A Path Forward provides a detailed plan for addressing these needs and suggests the creation of a new government entity, the National Institute of Forensic Science, to establish and enforce standards within the forensic science community. The benefits of improving and regulating the forensic science disciplines are clear: assisting law enforcement officials, enhancing homeland security, and reducing the risk of wrongful conviction and exoneration. Strengthening Forensic Science in the United States gives a full account of what is needed to advance the forensic science disciplines, including upgrading of systems and organizational structures, better training, widespread adoption of uniform and enforceable best practices, and mandatory certification and accreditation programs. While this book provides an essential call-to-action for congress and policy makers, it also serves as a vital tool for law enforcement agencies, criminal prosecutors and attorneys, and forensic science educators.

nd sec of state business search: Ten Years to Midnight Blair H. Sheppard, 2020-08-04 "Shows how humans have brought us to the brink and how humanity can find solutions. I urge people to read with humility and the daring to act." —Harpal Singh, former Chair, Save the Children, India, and former Vice Chair, Save the Children International In conversations with people all over the world, from government officials and business leaders to taxi drivers and schoolteachers, Blair Sheppard, global leader for strategy and leadership at PwC, discovered they all had surprisingly similar concerns. In this prescient and pragmatic book, he and his team sum up these concerns in what they call the ADAPT framework: Asymmetry of wealth; Disruption wrought by the unexpected and often problematic consequences of technology; Age disparities--stresses caused by very young or very old populations in developed and emerging countries; Polarization as a symptom of the breakdown in global and national consensus; and loss of Trust in the institutions that underpin and stabilize society. These concerns are in turn precipitating four crises: a crisis of prosperity, a crisis of technology, a crisis of institutional legitimacy, and a crisis of leadership. Sheppard and his team analyze the complex roots of these crises--but they also offer solutions, albeit often seemingly counterintuitive ones. For example, in an era of globalization, we need to place a much greater emphasis on developing self-sustaining local economies. And as technology permeates our lives, we need computer scientists and engineers conversant with sociology and psychology and poets who can code. The authors argue persuasively that we have only a decade to make headway on these problems. But if we tackle them now, thoughtfully, imaginatively, creatively, and energetically, in ten years we could be looking at a dawn instead of darkness.
