Article Content:

I. Understanding Your Search Needs:

Define Your Search Criteria for Accurate Results

Before embarking on your search, clearly define your needs. What industry are you interested in? What specific type of business are you looking for (e.g., restaurant, retailer, manufacturer)? Knowing the precise location (city, town) is crucial, as well as any size parameters (small business, large corporation). The more specific your criteria, the more targeted your search will be.

II. Utilizing Online Business Directories:

Leverage the New Hampshire Department of State

The New Hampshire Department of State website offers valuable resources, including business registration information, which can help you identify businesses operating legally within the state.

Explore Google My Business for Local Businesses

Google My Business is an invaluable tool for finding local businesses with customer reviews and contact information.

Utilize Yelp for Reviews and Ratings

Yelp provides user reviews and ratings, offering insight into customer experiences and helping you make informed decisions.

Harness Industry-Specific Directories for Targeted Searches

Depending on the industry you're interested in, consider using specialized directories. For example, the National Restaurant Association website may offer a directory of New Hampshire restaurants.

III. Leveraging Search Engines:

Optimize Your Search Queries for Maximum Efficiency

Use specific keywords related to your search. Instead of "business in NH," try "Italian restaurants in Portsmouth, NH" or "manufacturing companies in Manchester, NH."

Utilize Advanced Search Operators for Refined Results

Search engines offer advanced search operators (e.g., "site:nh.gov," "filetype:pdf") to refine your search and target specific websites or file types.

IV. Exploring Local Chambers of Commerce:

Connect with Local Chambers of Commerce for Business Insights

New Hampshire's various Chambers of Commerce maintain detailed listings of member businesses and offer valuable insights into the local business landscape.

Networking Opportunities through Local Chambers

Chambers of Commerce often host events and networking opportunities, facilitating connections with local businesses and potential partners.

V. Navigating Geographic Considerations:

Understanding New Hampshire's Diverse Regions

New Hampshire is geographically diverse, with distinct regions (e.g., Seacoast, Lakes Region, White Mountains). Tailoring your search to a specific region will yield more relevant results.

Targeting Specific Cities and Towns for Precise Results

Focusing your search on specific cities and towns within New Hampshire will greatly increase the accuracy of your results.

VI. Utilizing Social Media:

Harness Facebook, Instagram, and LinkedIn for Business Discovery

Social media platforms are valuable for finding businesses, particularly those with a strong online presence. Search for businesses using relevant keywords and hashtags.

Engage with Businesses Directly through Social Media

Social media allows you to directly contact businesses, ask questions, and learn more about their offerings before making a purchase or investment.

VII. Considering Specialized Search Tools:

Explore Niche Databases and Professional Networks

Depending on your search, consider using specialized databases or professional networks, such as LinkedIn, for more targeted results. These resources often have advanced search capabilities that can be highly effective.

Conclusion:

Finding the right business in New Hampshire requires a strategic approach. By combining the various methods discussed in this guide – utilizing online directories, optimizing search queries, engaging with local Chambers of Commerce, and leveraging social media – you can efficiently locate the businesses that meet your specific needs. Remember that a well-defined search strategy is key to success.

state of new hampshire business search: Patent Valuation William J. Murphy, John L.

Orcutt, Paul C. Remus, 2012-05-08 A practical resource for valuing patents that is accessible to the complete spectrum of decision makers in the patent process In today's economy, patents tend to be the most important of the intellectual property (IP) assets. It is often the ability to create, manage, defend, and extract value from patents that can distinguish competitive success and significant wealth creation from competitive failure and economic waste. Patent Valuation enhances the utility and value of patents by providing IP managers, IP creators, attorneys, and government officials with a useable resource that allows them to use actual or implied valuations when making patent-related decisions. Involves a combination of techniques for describing patent valuation Includes descriptions of various topics, illustrative cases, step-by-step valuation techniques, user-friendly procedures and checklists, and examples Serves as a useable resource that allows IP managers to use actual or implied valuations when making patent-related decisions One of the most fundamental premises of the book is that these valuation skills can be made accessible to each of the various decision makers in the patent process. Patent Valuation involves narrative descriptions of the various topics, illustrative cases, step-by-step valuation techniques, user-friendly procedures and checklists, and an abundance of examples to demonstrate the more complex concepts.

state of new hampshire business search: A Directory of Information Resources in the United States , 1965 state of new hampshire business search: Directory of Business Information Lawrence Rasie, 1995-06-02 It is one of the great ironies of the Information Age: we know a vast ocean of information now lies open to us, but it's all 'out there' somewhere; in fact, information often seems less accessible than ever before. And in business, where important judgments, decisions, and opportunities ride on timely access to crucial information, the irony becomes painful. Now, with the Directory of Business Information, businesspeople can access the vital information they need quickly and directly. Written by business journalist Lawrence Rasie, this valuable guide describes thousands of sources of information—and then links them directly to business databanks. It includes a framework of information on major industries and companies to help you narrow your search to the specific data you need. It also provides a network of sources for business research in any part of the country—without leaving your home, office, or school. The Directory of Business Information is divided into four major parts: Part 1 describes general sources of business information, including printed sources, online databases, CD ROM databases, microfilm, and telephone sources. Here you'll find a wealth of good starting points for your research: broad indexes to business news and trends, comprehensive directories for industries and companies, yearbooks, business newspapers and periodicals, major business broadcasts, and major business databases. Part 2 helps you focus in on three essential business topics: the economy, industries, and leading companies. In this part, which in itself would be worth the price of the book, the author summarizes the current status and future prospects of 350 major industries and the top 2,500 companies in those industries—complete with addresses, phone numbers, and approximate sales levels. Sources for further research include specialized indexes, periodicals, trade associations, and more. Part 3 opens up sources on specific business topics and functions, including new and small businesses, international business, and the federal government, among others. Part 4 shows you how to get valuable state and regional information, including—for each state—a description of its economy, key government offices, data centers and libraries, local publications, and a list of its largest companies and largest in-state employers. To make it even easier to use, the Directory of Business Information is supported by thorough, carefully prepared indexes, and by the inclusion of thousands of phone numbers of business experts in government, corporations, industry associations, publications, and libraries. For anyone involved with business in the United States—executives, investors, salespeople, librarians, and researchers—the Directory of Business Information is indispensable: it's the first place to look.

Quick Access to All the Business Information You Need Lawrence Rasie's Directory of Business Information gives anyone doing business research quick and direct access to vast amounts of information in all media. Based on sources developed during the author's twelve years as a business journalist, the Directory: Describes major sources of business information in the United States, including online databases, CD ROM sources, periodicals, newspapers, and broadcasts, and shows you how to access them easily Summarizes the current status and future prospects of 2,500 top companies in 350 industries—complete with names, addresses, phone numbers, and sales levels. Over 10,000 sources in all Opens new sources of information for specialized topics, such as new and small businesses, international business, and the federal government Provides key information and sources for each of the 50 states—allows you to research state and regional business environments without having to travel there Is thoroughly and carefully indexed for greater efficiency—a feature not found in many other, more expensive business reference books Business executives, market researchers, investors, librarians, entrepreneurs, students, and other professionals—anyone who needs immediate access to business information will find the Directory of Business Information an indispensable time and money-saving resource.
